South-Africa meeting for NEMEDUSSA project: Towards the accomplishment of the main outputs of the project

From 27th February to 3rd March, all the project experts from EU and African countries gathered at Mbombela, South Africa for a Nemedussa consortium meeting and workshops. During the workshops, a series of trainings and conferences have been animated on various relevant subjects related to “Nematology and the one earth approach” theme. More specifically, the workshops contributed to enhance the scientific knowledge-transfer on the approach related to nematode awareness, nematodes in agriculture etc. Various experts have been invited to share their vision and expertise in the topics, and plenty of participants have registered to take the workshops. Part of them have by the way received personal coaching on the topics. Professor Pierre Abad from Université Côte d’Azur delegation animated one of the practical sessions.

On the other side, the consortium meeting of the project partners allowed to outline the results accomplished since the beginning of the project, and the few ones kept on for the last part of the project. The next steps expected for the project will be the publication of a Master of Science (MSc) Book, next December, and the integration of the developed and revised MSc modules in the partner countries and trial-run. The training and Dissemination visits in companies will also be part of the activities to be led in the next weeks to sustain the promotion of this Erasmus+ funded project in CBHE

QUADIC: Online training sessions provided by Université Côte d’Azur to Western Balkan partners on internationalization strategy

In line with the trainings and workshops organized within the project framework, Université Côte d’Azur has participated to a training in Gjilan, Kosovo on the beginning of March. The purpose of the training was to share among the Balkan and European partners, a set of good practices and knowledge on mobility programs and international mobility. The two representatives of UCA have presented two training sessions on the management and promotion of international mobility, and the management of lump sum projects. These trainings will contribute to achieve the goal of the Erasmus+ financed project, which is to reach a high level of internationalization capacities in terms of structure, strategy and staff, for 14 universities of Kosovo and Albania.

The following step of the project will enable, starting April 2023, the accomplishment of a capacity assessment of the target universities, and the implementation of online coaching.
